THE FALL OF KINCHOW.

(1) A VIEW OF THE SHEDS AND THE LANDING OF A PORTION OF THE IMPERIAL BODYGUARD DIVISION AT LIUSHOOTUN.

The row of wooden roofed buildings in the centre are the temporarily-erected Depot Sheds; the white objects seen in various parts are tents and rifles; and the troops at rest are a portion of the Third Infantry Regiment of the Bodyguard.

Taken on the 18th April, 1895.

(2) A VIEW OF THE SHEDS AND THE LANDING OF A PORTION OF THE IMPERIAL BODYGUARD DIVISION AT LIUSHOOTUN.

In the centre of the picture is the great Pier at Liushootun; the houses on the left of the foot of this pier form the torpedo station; and the little pier on the right was temporarily constructed by the Japanese army. The building along the right boundary of the last-named is a shrine to Kwan-ti. The thick cluster of houses lower down is Liushootun. The troops resting in various groups are a portion of the Third Infantry Regiment, Imperial Bodyguard,

(2) CHINESE MEN OF WAR NEAR YANGHEA SEA FIRING UPON A PORTION OF THE FIFTH INFANTRY REGIMENT, WHICH IS IN PURSUIT OF THE CHINESE FUGITIVES ALONG THE SHORE FROM YANGHEATUN TOWARDS WEI-HAI-WEI.

The cannon-smoke on the right is emitted by the Chinese man-of-war, Ching-yuen or Tai-yuen, while the black smoke to the left of it is from the Ting-yuen. The mountain on the right is Liukung Island, while that on the left is Takowshan, the right extremity of which is Peishantsuy. The small figures below are the fugitive Chinese, while the larger are the two Japanese companies in pursuit.

THE CENTRAL AND PART OF THE RIGHT PORTION OF TSESZETAI FORTS ON THE W. COAST OF WEI-HAI-WEI

EXPEDITION TO WEI-HAI-WEI.

A PORTION OF THE EMINENCE TO THE LEFT OF THE TSESZETAI FORTS ON THE W. COAST OF WEI-HAI-WEI.

The ruins on the centre were caused by explosion on the Chinese abandoning the place; the two lines from the top of the earthworks on the right to the lower corner of the same side are the connecting wires of subterraneous mines. The nailed boards on the road side at the bottom of the picture are supplementary defences.

THE REAR DEFENCES OF TIL HILL TO THE N. OF THE TSESZETAI FORTS, ON THE W. COAST OF WEI-HAI-WEI.

The road running by the telegraph post on the left of the gate in the centre leads to Hwangtocyai and Peishantsuy. The thirteen square apertures above are entrances to the works. The dark strip on its left and over the summit is a line of defence formed of sand-bags. The flight of steps on the right is on the left extremity of a hill to the left of the forts.

ATTACK MADE BY THE FORTS AT JIH ISLAND AND THE SOUTH-EASTERN HEAD OF LIUKUNG ISLAND AND THE CHINESE MEN OF WAR UPON THE ALREADY CAPTURED LUKEUTSUY FORTS, ON THE E. COAST OF WEI-HAI WEI, AND THE JAPANESE ARMY ON LAND.

The mountain seen in the distance is Liukung Island. The centre of the three prominent points on the Island is the signal tower, and the right is for the electric light. The white smoke to be seen on the extreme right of the picture is the smoke from the fort on the S. E. end of the Island; the two sprays slightly to its left are the shells dropped into the water from the captured Lukeutsuy Fort. The white smoke to the left is from the Jih Island forts. The man-of-war firing on the left is the Ting-yuen, to the left of which is the Tsu yuen (?). The smoke between the two ships is from a shell fired by the Tsi yuen. The streak on the sea running slantwise to the right from Jih Island is the boom. The construction before it on the shore is the Lukeutsuy Fort captured by the Japanese, and the large building on its left is the torpedo-station.
